Bedwetting Information

Bedwetting Alarms Are Effective

Bedwetting alarms are a mainstay in the treatment of bedwetting. They are an easy first step that provide a long lasting effect. Bedwetting alarms are much different than setting an alarm clock to wake your child. They sound in response to urination, which varies in time from night to night.

How Alarms Work

Bedwetting alarms help children learn to achieve nighttime dryness by conditioning the child to stop the flow of urine when sleeping. A loud noise sounds at the first drops of urine and awakens the child. Over time children learn to sense the need to awaken in response to a full bladder and contract the pelvic floor muscles to inhibit the flow of urine.

Most alarms consist of a small, wearable plastic alarm box that attaches to the shoulder area and a moisture sensor that attaches to snug fitting underwear. Alarms are battery operated so there is no risk of shock. Parents play an important role in helping the child arouse in response to the alarm. Because of their child's decreased sleep arousal, many parents hear the alarm before their child responds to it. By reminding their child what to do next - walk to the bathroom to urinate - the parent helps establish a new response. Over time, the child learns to do this independently and sleep dry all night!

Using an alarm gives the child some control over their wetting, enhancing their self-esteem and social freedom. The average length of time required to become dry varies from a few weeks to a few months, but treating bedwetting with an alarm can decrease the length of time they are affected by years.

Tips for Selecting an Alarm

Before choosing an alarm, consider the following factors:

Usability - Will your child wear the alarm? Look at some of the "kid cool" designs, in bright colors, to encourage children to wear them. Are you comfortable sewing sensor pockets onto underwear or do you want an easy clip-on sensor?

Comfort - Is the alarm lightweight and comfortable to wear? Watch out for alarms with bulky moisture pads that children won't wear.

Durability - Is the sensor difficult to unhook during sleep movements? Be leery of alarms that use metal snaps and hooks that easily come undone.

Audible - Does the alarm sound to wake the sleeping child? While combination alarm/vibration alarms add an extra dimension of arousal, potty alarms that only vibrate won't wake the large majority of bedwetting children. Initially, it is important that parents can hear the alarm to assist their child to get up.

Turnoff - Can the child easily disconnect the sensor and roll back over and go to sleep? Alarms that require more than one step to turn them off promote more alertness.

When to Start Treatment

This is a decision only you and your child can make in consultation with your physician or nurse practitioner. Research shows that alarm therapy is most effective if both child and family are motivated to achieve dryness. Most pediatricians recommend that your child be at least six years of age. Approximately 15% of children who wet will stop each year without any help — and 85% won't!

Bedwetting Alarms

Bedwetting alarms are an effective, medication free, method to teach permanent nighttime dryness. All bedwetting alarms are moisture sensing devices that sound an audible alarm and/or vibrate when urine is detected. There are many types of alarms to choose from. We feature both pad alarms and the newer wearable alarms.

Pad type alarms consist of a moisture sensing pad that lays on the bed which sounds in response to urine. These alarms are well suited for children who prefer not to have an alarm attached to the underwear.

Wearable alarms require less urine to trigger the sensor than pad alarms. The newer models of wearable alarms/sensors are very lightweight, comfortable and sensitive to a small amount of urine.

All alarms sound at approximately 80-90 decibels so that parents can also be alerted, to initially assist their children in learning a new response to a full bladder. Siblings are rarely bothered by the sound of the alarm.

Traditional Bed Pad Alarms — When a Wearable Alarm Won't Do

The Wet Call is a moisture sensing bed pad/alarm specifically designed for children who won't wear an alarm. The Wet Call bed pad is placed under the child and the battery powered alarm sounds a tone when the pad's sensor strips detect moisture. The alarm is connected via a 5 foot cord to the 19 inch x 24 inch bed pad and can either be placed on the shoulder of the pajama top, or attached to the bed. Includes instructions and batteries.

#KCAL Wet Call Bedwetting Alarm $84.95

The Malem Bed-Side is a unique device for children who don't want to wear an alarm. An embossed plastic moisture sensing bed pad is placed under the child and the alarm sounds when the pad's sensor strips detect moisture. The pad should be placed under a draw sheet, or inside a pillow case.

The bed mat is attached to the battery powered alarm unit by a 7 foot cord that does not disturb the user in bed. The 15 1/2 inch by 21 inch bed mat can be easily cleaned and dried. The unique alarm unit has a wide range of sound options that allow you to select one that optimally meets your child's needs. You have a choice of 8 built in tones or a custom sound you record yourself!

Kids Enjoy Wearing Our SMALLEST Bedwetting Alarm

Kid's Choice!

Children love these brightly colored and well-designed alarms from Malem. A small, ultra lightweight plastic box is comfortably worn on the night wear top close to the shoulder. It weighs less than one ounce including batteries and even glows when sounding!

The alarm is connected to a small clip-on sensor which detects moisture. The new Easy-Clip sensor – only one inch long – has the advantage of being able to securely clip and anchor to the outside of any close fitting underwear for boys or girls. No sewing to hassle with or metal clips or snaps to come undone during the night. The sound is turned off by disconnecting the sensor from the underwear, then pushing a button on the alarm.

Malem alarms are well constructed, durable and have sounds specifically selected to wake children. Available with a single tone (red) or 8 separate tones (yellow) to prevent "audio accommodation". One tone is activated each time the alarm is triggered on the yellow alarm.

Quilted top for comfort and felt bonded vinyl barrier protects against moisture. Yes, this mattress pad is quiet! Machine wash/dry. Fitted skirt edge. Backed by a five year warranty. Waterproof Bedding Tips

Today, there are several great waterproof products to keep your child and your mattress dry — all aimed to reduce mattress damage and excessive laundry!

Waterproof Overlays - These washable, waterproof, absorbent pads are ideal for making the transition from disposable pants to regular underwear. Place the overlay over the bottom sheet to keep bedding dry. After a wetting episode, simply remove one pad and put a clean one in its place to sleep in a dry bed.

Vinyl Covers - Zippered vinyl covers protect your mattress from spills, stains, odors and dust mites. An inexpensive way to add years of life to your mattress and lock out moisture and allergens.

Waterproof Mattress Pads - Why settle for a plain mattress pad when you can choose a waterproof, antibacterial one? Once a mattress is stained by urine, it is difficult to restore the mattress to its original condition. Make sure you choose a pad that uses a skirt to stay securely in place, is absorbent and quiet!

Not just for bedwetting — great for rental properties, camps, adults with incontinence and pet owners, too.

Daytime Wetting

Vibratory Reminder Devices

We feature several devices that work well for children prescribed timed voiding regimens or for other situations where a silent reminder is important. All devices have unique features that make them useful for reminding children, or adults, with a vibrating pulse that is discreet and more difficult to ignore than audible alarms.

All vibrating watch faces are standard sized because of the watch mechanism and battery. Not just for timed voiding — great for medication reminders, diabetic monitoring and any health condition that requires scheduled interventions.

Key Features

Vibratory devices are wonderful for providing a silent alarm that is hard to ignore.

VibralITE - The countdown mode allows you to set the watch for one fixed interval (e.g., 2 hours). When the time reaches zero, it vibrates for approximately 20 seconds and automatically counts down again and again.

MeDose - Useful when you need flexibility in setting reminders other than fixed intervals. Set up to six alarms to vibrate for approximately 20 seconds each.

Invisible Clock - Worn on the waist. Provides fixed interval countdowns or up to twelve individual alarms that can be set to beep or vibrate for 6 seconds.

Vibrating Wrist Watch with Auto Reset Countdown Mode

The VibralITE 3 watch can be set to remind children to void at fixed intervals during the day. It features an auto restart countdown mode and can be set to vibrate or sound. Once the watch vibrates, it automatically resets and counts down again. The standard sized watch displays real time, day-date, month and also has a timer, stopwatch and back light! Easy to use Velcro band. Water resistant.

This watch provides flexibility in setting reminders at times other than exact intervals (e.g., every two hours) to coincide with school schedules (e.g. 8:35am, 10:20am, 12:17am, 2:23pm, 4:30pm and 6:30pm). “Hard to ignore” vibrating alarms go off every day without restarting. The youthful looking watch can be set for vibration or sound. The standard sized watch displays real time, day-date, month and also has a timer, stopwatch and back light! Blue/red colors and easy to use Velcro band. Also available in black/silver with black leather band. Water resistant.

The Invisible Clock is a small (1.5in x 2in) vibratory device to help remind children to perform activities. Up to 12 individual alarms/reminders may be set each day or the countdown timer can be used for alerts at specific intervals of time (e.g., every two hours). A durable clear plastic belt clip secures the device to the waistband. The screen displays time and date. You may select vibration or sound. Uses one AAA battery. No paging service required.
